Empowered to Succeed

Children are born with open hearts and minds and boundless potential. Every moment presents possibilities, and each choice shapes the next. It’s up to parents, educators, and the larger community to teach children how to navigate the ups and downs of life.

What We’ve Learned

1. Emotional health and social skills shape how children view and interact with the world.
2. When students feel safe, respected, and connected, they are less likely to cause problems and more able to learn.
3. High-quality, research-based SEL programs, when implemented schoolwide with fidelity, lead to measurable social, emotional, and academic gains.

Our Second Step program features a research-based sequence of lessons that is pedagogically sound and loved by students and staff. Additional units for bullying prevention and child protection start with all-staff training, build on students’ foundational Second Step skills, and engage families. This coordinated, holistic approach saves schools time and money because they no longer have to piece together programs from different providers and fill in gaps on their own.

More than 26,000 schools around the world use the Second Step program to prevent disruptive behavior, preserve learning time, and promote a positive school climate that fosters student confidence, competence, and compassion. Dedy Fauntleroy, principal at John Stanford International School in Seattle, WA, sums up why that matters:

“Social-emotional learning is so important because our job is to create productive, happy citizens.”

Committee for Children was born to help keep children safe and promote their well-being. Since 1979, we’ve been operating as a nonprofit to develop programs and research what works in education to protect children from abuse, prevent bullying, and help children thrive. We’ve helped shape social-emotional learning (SEL) as a framework for teaching life skills that sustain health and happiness.

Reimagining Education

We’re leading a movement to transform education so our children are better prepared to be creative problem-solvers with strong communication and collaboration skills. Today’s business and civic leaders say that these traits can be even more important than acquiring specific technology skills or scoring well on aptitude tests. In response to this growing demand, our executive director, Joan Cole Duffell, wrote an op-ed in the Pacific Standard, saying:

“Smart educators know social-emotional skills aren’t a nice-to-have frill or an extra add-on; they’re fundamental to a well-educated 21st-century child’s future well-being.”

The Second Step program has been endorsed by numerous organizations—including the Collaborative for Academic, Social, and Emotional Learning—for the quality of its research, training, and teacher and family support.

Did You Know?

• A randomized trial of 36 middle schools showed that students in Second Step schools said they were 42% less likely to be involved in fights than those in control schools.
• Programs that support social-emotional learning can be more effective at reducing school violence than zero-tolerance policies.
• In a meta-analysis of studies, SEL participants demonstrated an average 11% gain in academic performance, as well as significantly improved social and emotional skills, attitudes, and behavior.
• 97% of teachers across America say SEL will benefit students from all backgrounds.

“...are zero-tolerance policies effective in the schools? An evidentiary review and recommendations.” "Emotional health and social skills shape how children view and interact with the world. When students feel safe, respected, and connected, they are less likely to cause problems and more able to learn. High-quality, research-based SEL programs, when implemented schoolwide with fidelity, lead to measurable social, emotional, and academic gains."

Children Protection Unit
Working together to keep kids safe from abuse

“Let’s take the opportunity as adults to learn a code of conduct: how to respond, who to tell. Because otherwise we leave children so vulnerable.”

—Suzin Bartley, Executive Director
MA Children’s Trust

Nothing is more important than protecting children from abuse—and doing so takes vigilance on everyone’s part. To truly make a difference, both adults and children need to be educated.

The Child Protection Unit includes:
• Unlimited online staff training
• Student lesson notebook for each grade (lessons, posters, DVD)
• Family materials (letters, videos, take-home activities)
• Additional online resources (teaching, implementation, and evaluation tools)

Bullying Prevention Unit
The power to create a positive school climate

“The Bullying Prevention Unit has everything that we want. It’s teaching people to recognize what really is bullying, to respond to it now, and how to report it. Now the district has a perfect plan.”

—Nicholas J. Cinulli, Jr., Principal, Louis H. Farrell Elementary, Philadelphia, PA

Why choose the Second Step Bullying Prevention Unit?

Research based, teacher approved
Based on the latest research in the field and put to the test in real classrooms so teachers can trust they’re making the best use of class time

A 360° approach to bullying prevention
Via online training, school staff learn to work with all students involved in bullying, including bystanders, for an improved school climate and reduced bullying

Lessons with stories by Trudy Ludwig
Stories co-written by a beloved children’s author come to life through claymation, animation, and live-action videos designed to help kids recognize, report, and refuse bullying

Students can trust staff response
All staff learn how to recognize and respond effectively to bullying through the online training, an experience that can be completed individually or during an in-service

Learning extends to the home
Family materials reinforce the learning beyond school and help teach parents to distinguish between peer conflict and bullying

AGES 4–5

Energetic, enthusiastic, and ready to learn

Young children and their boundless energy can be inspirational and invigorating. Help your littlest learners harness their power and potential by teaching them to listen, pay attention, control their behavior, and get along with others. When students enter kindergarten with the self-regulation and social-emotional skills taught in the research-based Second Step program, they’re set up for success.

“When I look into those children’s faces, I see possibilities. I see joy. I see excitement. My goal looking back 15 years from now is that we can say, ‘Well done.’”

Grades 2 and 3

Growing up and getting along

As second- and third-grade students mature socially and academically, the research-based Second Step program teaches them skills such as avoiding assumptions, managing feelings, and focusing attention. The games, videos, and lessons can really capture kids’ imaginations, reinforcing the learning they’ll carry with them throughout school and beyond.

“ ’I find my students using the calming-down techniques—the counting, the breathing techniques—without me even prompting them.”
—Pandora Jackson, Third-Grade Teacher, Maple Tree Elementary, Milwaukee, WI

Skills for Social and Academic Success

Grades 4 and 5
Confident, connected, and collaborative

As fourth- and fifth-grade students interact even more with their peers, the research-based Second Step program reinforces skills such as managing strong feelings and taking responsibility for their actions. Award-winning music videos can make remembering their problem-solving and calming-down skills a breeze. And teaching kids valuable concepts such as taking others’ perspectives and dealing with gossip helps them transition to adolescence.

Setting a course for success

Middle-schoolers need help navigating the turbulent waters of adolescence, including tough situations such as peer pressure, substance abuse, and cyber bullying. The research-based Second Step program provides age-appropriate lessons to teach kids in Grades 6–8 important skills for success in learning and in life. Engaging video vignettes and colorful posters keep the content fresh, while take-home materials reinforce skills and help open the lines of communication between school and home.

Second Step materials available in Spanish

“...The most important part is that the kids all understand the lesson. We still have to meet them where they are with their home language, as well. So I love that our teachers have the tools now with all the translated Second Step materials.”

Good news!

Funding is available for our programs from a wide variety of sources. Our clients have purchased our programs using funds from:

- Head Start
- Special Education (IDEA)
- Title I and Title II
- Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention
- Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration
- PTA
- Elementary and Secondary School Counseling grants
- Children’s trusts

When considering applying for a grant, please contact us. Our team can help you understand how Second Step programs align with specific criteria in grant applications.
Nothing’s more important than keeping kids safe from abuse. That’s why we’re providing child protection resources for families, for free. This collection of short videos and articles will help parents talk to their children in ways that can keep them safe from sexual abuse.

Topics include:

- Safety rules. Sexual abuse prevention skills can be taught like rules about seatbelts and fire safety. We show parents how.
- Talking about it. Parents need to talk to kids about sexual abuse but may not know what to say. These resources can help start conversations.
- What if it’s someone you know? Ninety percent of sexual abuse is committed by someone the child knows. What’s a realistic way for a parent to face this fact and plan for protection?

For all our child protection resources, visit: cfchildren.org/keepkidsafe

Supporting effective districtwide implementation

Coordinating an implementation of the Second Step program? If so, the Second Step Leadership Institute is an opportunity to learn directly from our experts about systemic implementation strategies and collaborate with peers. From day one, the dynamic exchange of ideas generates valuable suggestions you can put to use in your schools. A full year of interactions with a professional learning community dedicated to social-emotional learning keeps you inspired and connected.

The 2015–16 Second Step Leadership Institute will kick off with a two-day meeting for all institute participants in Seattle, WA. Monthly live, online meetings continue to support key implementation milestones.

Kickoff: June 10–11, 2015
Application deadline: April 30, 2015
Institute runs June 2015–June 2016

Fee: $495
Includes the two-day kickoff event, institute materials, year-long activities, and support. Participants are responsible for their own travel and accommodation expenses.

Stay through June 12 and attend our inaugural Keep Kids Safe Summit! Hear from experts about child protection in schools and take back valuable information you can put to use immediately.

To learn more and apply for the Leadership Institute, visit: cfchildren.org/SSL

“...it has been motivating to hear from colleagues around the nation what they’re doing with the Second Step program. I’ve gotten great ideas and information to take back with me. I’m going to go back energized!”
